PROPER WAYS TO PROVIDE CONSTRUCTIVE FEEDBACK TO EMPLOYEES

(<https://blog.philjobnet.gov.ph/2019/01/07/proper-way-to-provide-constructive-feedback-to-employees/>)

- 1. Set a clear direction and work towards a solution. It should be clear that feedback is to make any issue clear and to work towards a solution and not to simply reprimand an employee.
- 2. Mix it up with good and the 'not so' good points. Mention his accomplishments and not just the things that they should work on.
- 3. Give time to listen. Let the recipient of the feedback talk and give his comments or ask questions about what has happened and what his or her next move will be after he or she has received assessment or comments about his work or attitude.
- 4. Ask for a time frame. Have the person commit to a time frame that he can meet. Give ample time for the employee or co-worker to work on the areas of improvement that you mentioned.
- 5. Stay calm and collected. Providing feedback and remember you are there for guidance and for a tongue-lashing.
- 6. Do a one-on-one session. Ideally, feedback should be done one on one, face to face and in a quiet environment in order to avoid sharing the details of the session with other employees. Ensure privacy when communicating feedback.
