The 'Right Thing' to do when you see a Job Opportunity

Successful job applicants often ask themselves if their skills and know-how are adequate in order to get the job that they want. You cannot immediately apply to a job opening simply because it matches your preferred job title. More often, companies have different requirements and expectations from candidates even if there are similar job titles across industries. But having that "go-getter" attitude has proven time and time again we've seen people with this attitude move ahead of the competition because sheer determination itself can get you places.
